CHAPTER IV—Continued.
—11—

As they resumed their talk Alice, it seemed, was relating something of moment for Arrowsmith's benefit, referring now and then to Mrs. Farnsworth as though for corroboration. The scene in the box was almost as interesting as any in the play, and the audience watched with deep absorption. Alice, the least self-conscious of mortals, was, I knew, utterly unaware of the curious gaze of the house; whatever she was saying with an occasional gesture of her gloved hand or a shrug of her shoulders possessed her completely. I thought she might be telling Arrowsmith of her adventures at Barton; but the length of her narrative was against this, and Arrowsmith's attitude was more that of a critic appealed to for an opinion than of a polite listener to a story. He nodded his head several times, and finally as Alice, with a slight dip of the head and an outward movement of her arms, settled back in her chair, he patted his hands approvingly.

In my absorption I had forgotten Montani's existence, but as the third act began I saw that he had gone. Whether I should put myself in Alice's way as she left the theater was still an undetermined question when the play ended. With Montani hanging about I felt a certain obligation to warn her that he had been watching her. I was among the first to leave, and in the foyer I met Forsythe, the house manager, who knew me as a friend of Searles.

"You notice that we're still turning 'em away," he remarked. "We don't have to worry about this piece; everybody who sees it sends his friends the next day. Searles hasn't looked in for some time; hope he's writing a new play?"

"He's West visiting his folks. Don't know when he'll be back," I answered. "I must write him that Sir Cecil Arrowsmith enjoyed 'Who Killed Cock Robin?' just as much as common mortals."

Forsythe had paused at the box-office, and in my uncertainty I stuck to him as the crowd began to surge by.

Arrowsmith's approach was advertised by the peculiar type of tall hat that he affected, and the departing audience made way for him, or hung back to stare. At his left were Alice and Mrs. Farnsworth, and they must pass quite close to me. "Who Killed Cock Robin?" was a satisfying play that sent audiences away with lightened hearts and smiling faces, and the trio were no exception to the rule.

Listening inattentively to Forsythe, I was planning to join Alice when the trio should reach me. She saw me; there was a fleeting flash of recognition in her eyes, and then she turned toward Arrowsmith. She drew nearer; her gaze met mine squarely, but now without a sign to indicate that she had ever seen me before. She passed on, talking with greatest animation to Arrowsmith.

"Well, remember me to Searles if you write him," I heard Forsythe saying. I clutched his arm as he opened the office door.

"Who are those women?" I demanded.

"You may search me! I see you have a good eye. That girl's rather nice to look at!"

Crowding my way to the open, I blocked the path of orderly, sane citizens awaiting their machines until a policeman pushed me aside. Alice I saw for a bewildering instant, framed in the window of a big limousine that rolled away uptown.

I had been snubbed! No snub had ever been delivered more deliberately, with a nicer calculation of effect, than that administered to me by Alice Bashford—a girl with whom, until a moment before, I had believed myself on terms of cordial comradeship. She had cut me; Alice who had asked me at the very beginning of our acquaintance to call her by her first name—Alice had cut me without the quiver of a lash.

I walked to the Thackeray and settled myself in a dark corner of the reading room, thoroughly bruised in spirit. In my resentment I meditated flying to Ohio to join Searles, always my chief resource in trouble. Affairs at Barton might go to the devil. If Alice and her companion wanted to get rid of me, I would not be sorry to be relieved of the responsibility I had assumed in trying to protect them. With rising fury I reflected that by the time they had shaken off Montani and got rid of the prisoner in the tool house they would think better of me.

"Telephone call, sir."

I followed the boy to the booth in a rage that any one should disturb my gloomy reflections.

"Mr. Singleton? Oh! This is Alice speaking—"

I clutched the shelf for support. Not only was it Alice speaking, but in the kindest voice imaginable. My anger passed, but my amazement at Alice and all her ways blinded me. If she had suddenly stepped through the wall, my surprise could not have been greater.

"You told me the Thackeray was your usual refuge in town, so I thought I'd try it. Are you very, very cross? I'm sorry, really I am—Bob!"

The "Bob" was added lingeringly, propitiating. Huddled in the booth, I doubted my senses—wondering indeed whether Alice hadn't a double—even whether I hadn't dreamed everything that had occurred at Barton.

"I wanted to speak to you ever so much at the theater, but I couldn't very well without introducing you to Sir Cecil, and I wasn't ready to do that. It might have caused complications."

If anything could have multiplied the existing complications, I was anxious to know what they were; but her voice was so gentle, so wholly amiable, that I restrained an impulse to demand explanations.

"Are you on earth or are you speaking from paradise?" I asked.

"Oh, we're in a very nice house, Constance and I; and we're just about having a little supper. I wish you were here, but that can't be arranged. No; really it can't! We shall be motoring back to Barton to-morrow and hope you can join us. Let us have luncheon and motor up together."

When I suggested that I call for them she laughed gayly.

"That would be telling things! And we musn't spoil everything when everything is going so beautifully."

Remembering the man I had locked up in the tool-house and the explanations I should have to make sooner or later to the unimaginative Torrence, I wasn't wholly convinced of the general beauty of the prospect.

"Montani was in the theater," I suggested.

Her laughter rippled merrily over the wire. "Oh, he tried to follow us in a taxi! We had a great time throwing him off in the park. I'm not sure he isn't sitting on the curb right now watching the house ungraciously."

"You have the fan with you; Montani jumped right out of his seat

This she received with more laughter; Montani amused her immensely, she said. She wasn't in the least afraid of him. Returning to the matter of the luncheon, she suggested the Tyringham.

"You know, I want very much to see Mr. Bashford's old home and the place all our veteran retainers came from. At one?—yes. Good night!"

Alice and Mrs. Farnsworth reached the Tyringham on time to the minute. As I had spent the morning on a bench in the park, analyzing my problems, I found their good humor a trifle jarring.

"You don't seem a bit glad to see us," Alice complained as she drew off her gloves. "How can any one be anything but happy after seeing that delicious 'Cock Robin'? It is so deliously droll."

"I haven't," I remarked with an attempt at severity, "quite your knack of ignoring disagreeable facts. There was Montani right in front of me, jumping like a jack-in-the-box every time you flourished your fan. There's that fellow we've got locked up at Barton——"

"Just hear the man, Constance!" she interrupted with her adorable laugh. "We were thinking that he was only beginning to see things our way, the only true way, the jolly way, and here he cometh like a melancholy Jacques! We'll have none of it!"

"We must confess," said Mrs. Farnsworth conciliatingly, "that Mr. Singleton is passing through a severe trial. We precipitated ourselves upon him without warning, and immediately involved him in a mesh of mystery. His imagination must have time to adjust itself."

They were spoiling my appetite; I was perfectly aware of that. I had ordered the best luncheon I knew how to compose, and they were doing full justice to it; but I was acting, I knew, like a resentful boy.

"I love you that way," said Alice as I stared vacantly at my plate. "But you really are not making yourself disagreeable to us—really he is not, Constance!"

Mrs. Farnsworth affirmed this. I knew that I was merely being rude, and the consciousness of this was not uplifting. At the luncheon hour the influx of shoppers gives the Tyringham a cheery tone, and all about us were people apparently conversing sanely and happily. The appearance of Uncle Bash's ghost in the familiar dining room would have been a welcome diversion. I was speculating as to just what he would say about his widow and the whole mess at Barton when Mrs. Farnsworth addressed me pleadingly.

"If you knew that we want you to play with us only a few days longer—three days, shall we say, Alice?—if you knew that then we'll untangle everything, wouldn't you be nice—very nice?"

In spite of myself I couldn't resist this appeal. I was more and more impressed by the fineness, the charm of Mrs. Farnsworth. When she dropped the make-believe foolishness in which she indulged quite as amusingly as Alice, she appeared to be a very sensible person. The humor danced in her eyes now, but her glance was more than an appeal; it was a command.

"If you knew that our troubles are not at all the troubles you're thinking about, but very different—"

"Please pardon me," I muttered humbly, and wished that Alice were not so bewitching in a sailor hat. It may have have been the hat or only Mrs. Farnsworth's pleading tone that brought me to a friendlier attitude toward the universe and its visible inhabitants. The crowd thinned out, but we lingered, talking of all manner of things.

"We must come in again very soon," sand Alice. "And next time we shan't run away, which was very naughty. I suppose when you begin a story you just have to keep it going or it will die on your hands. That's the way with our story, you know. Of course it's unkind to mystify you; but you are in the story just as we are."

My mystification was certainly deep enough without this suggestion that I was a mere character in a tale whose awkward beginning aroused only the gravest apprehensions as to the conclusion. She looked at her watch and continued: "I'm so absurd—really I am, in ever so many ways, that no one would ever put me in a book. Everyone would say no such person ever existed! It's incredible! And so I have to pretend I'm in a story all the time. It's the only way I can keep happy. And so many people are in my story now, not only Montani and the poor fellow locked up at Barton—oh, what if he should escape! Constance, it would be splendid if he should escape!"

"You didn't finish your enumeration of characters," I suggested. "Is my part an important one or am I only a lay figure?"

"My dear boy," cried Mrs. Farnsworth, "you are the hero! You have been the hero from the hour the story began. If you should desert us now, whatever should we do?"

"If I'm the hero," I replied in her own key, "I shall begin making love to Alice at once."

Alice, far from being disturbed by my declaration, nodded her head approvingly.

"Oh, we had expected that! But you needn't be in a hurry. In a story like this one, that runs right on from day to day, we must leave a lot to chance. And there are ever so many chances—"

"Not all on the side of failure, I hope?"

"We must be going." She laughed. I wished she hadn't that characteristic little turn of the head that was so beguiling!

Folly rode with us all the way to Barton. If anything sensible was uttered on the drive, I can't recall it. Our talk, chiefly of knights and ladies, and wild flights from imaginary enemies, had the effect of spurring Flynn to perilous spurts of speed.

BELONG TO HOLIDAY SEASON

Christmas Festivities Would Not Be Complete Without the Holly and the Mistletoe.

Several thousand tons of holly as well as hundreds of tons of mistletoe are shipped over the railroads each year before the opening of the holiday season. The mistletoe is placed in small packages because it is easy to break off the tiny white bells, and the plant is more rare and costly.

Holly abounds all over the world, over 100 species having been determined, but only 14 varieties are to be found in the United States. The finest American species of holly is the Ilex Opaca, but the mountain holly is also a choice variety. The English holly has a sturdier leaf, and a more vivid and lustrous green. The wood of the holly is very hard and smooth in the grain, and is almost equal to boxwood for engraving purposes, while its leaves are the emblem of forethought because of the protection given to the buds by the defensive thorns.

The holly, however, is not so highly prized for the Christmas season as the mistletoe, which is rare, delicate and beautiful and the source of many ancient Druidic legends. In the United States mistletoe is chiefly found in the southern states, while that used in England is chiefly produced in the orchards of Normandy. It is also the state flower of Oklahoma.

Indians and Japanese.

Professor Mena, Mexican scientist, went to Tehuacan in 1903 to investigate a story that in small towns near by Chinese talked in their own tongue to the Indians and were perfectly understood. He found the legend false. Japanese scholars visiting the Mexican museum have been surprised to find articles used by the Indians exactly the same as those used by Japanese peasants.

Filipino Wife's Status.

In the Philippine islands, when women marry, they go into partnership with their husbands. While the men handle the workers, the women attend to the finance, act as cashiers, pay the workers and oversee much of the business. They also have equality with the men in everything except voting.

Paris was the first city in which fire escapes were used, the date being 1761.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

LESSON FOR JUNE 13

A SHEPHERD BOY CHOSEN KING.

LESSON TEXT—I Sam. 15:1-13.
GOLDEN TEXT—The Spirit of the Lord came upon David from that day forward.—I Sam. 16:13.
ADDITIONAL MATERIAL—Ps. 2.
PRIMARY TOPIC—The Story of a Shepherd Boy.
JUNIOR TOPIC—A Kingly Shepherd Boy.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Road to Promotion.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Possibilities of Youth.

I. The Lord Rebuked Samuel for Excessive Grief (v. 1).

It was a bitter experience for Samuel to pronounce God's judgment upon Saul. The cause of Samuel's grief was threefold:

1. The wreck of a promising life. In all history, perhaps, a life with greater promise cannot be found, and yet it affords no example of a more wretched failure.

2. A personal loss. No doubt as the spiritual adviser of the king, Samuel found many things in him to admire. His removal, therefore, Samuel most keenly felt.

3. Anxiety for the national welfare. Samuel knew quite well that a change of dynasty oftentimes meant severe war and the reign of anarchy. This would very seriously weaken the already weak kingdom. His concern for the people's good was therefore a part of his grief. One can readily see why Samuel should mourn, but as a prophet of God he should not have indulged to excess. The Lord's question "How long will thou mourn for Saul?" has in it a rebuke for Samuel. Grief for others is a sacred thing, but whenever it is carried so far as to interfere with one's duty it becomes sinful.

II. Samuel Sent to Bethlehem to Anoint Saul's Successor (vv. 1-5).

Though Saul failed, God is able to provide a successor who is better than he. Samuel is directed to go to Bethlehem and from among the sons of Jesse choose a successor. Samuel again showed his weakness in expressing his fear lest Saul should kill him. If God sends a man on an errand what matters it though a thousand Saul's be waiting to kill him? Even though it means death, if God sends, who dare refuse or offer excuse? God instructed him to avoid publicity by the concealment of his real purpose. Some may question the diplomacy of Samuel, but we must remember that no one is under obligation to tell all that he knows, especially to parties who have no moral right to know. To withhold truth which is necessary morally to tell is duplicity which dare not be practiced. God allowed Samuel to hide his true errand under the cloak of a sacrifice in order to shelter his weakness. The whole matter was already decided; the moral acts were already committed; the issues were already faced. The exposure of Samuel to the murderous hatred of Saul would have only made matters worse.

III. The Method of God's Choice (vv. 6-12).

The elders of Bethlehem were somewhat alarmed when Samuel came. He, in the exercise of his judgeship, went from place to place, and at times he doubtless had to deal in severity with the people. He calmed their fears by assuring them that he came peaceably, even to worship God. While the preparation for the sacrifice was being made, Samuel seems to have had the interview with Jesse and his sons. When the eldest of Jesse's sons passed before him he decided that this stalwart young man must be God's choice, but God told him that man looketh on the outward appearance, but the Lord looketh on the heart. We should learn, like Samuel was obliged to do, that the qualifications in God's sight for workers are inward, not bodily. The one who does God's work must do it by leaning upon him, not through personal strength or endowments. To the utter surprise of Samuel and Jesse, David the shepherd boy, was chosen.

IV. Samuel Anoints David (v. 13).

When this stripling of a boy came before Samuel, the Lord indicated his choice. Samuel proceeded to anoint him. This anointing typified the endowment of the Holy Spirit, which is essential for any and all service for God. The preparation which David needed for the office of king was just what he got as a shepherd boy. God's choices are not arbitrary. As king, his responsibility was to defend, feed, and lead God's flock, and this he had learned to do as he attended his father's flock. This promotion of the shepherd boy should be an encouragement for boys of lowly station in life.

The Strength of Peace.

In a state of peace the soul lives as in a watered garden, where, under the watchful eye of the Divine Source, the plant grows and strengthens. All religious habits and duties—prayer, charity, and mercy—are formed and matured when the man is in a state of peace with others—with all men; when he is not agitated by small selfish excitements and interests which divert him from himself and his own path of duty, but can think of himself, what he ought to do, and where he is going. He can then live seriously, calmly, and wisely; but there is an end to all religious progress when a man's whole mind is taken up in the morbid excitement of small enmities.—J. B. Mozley.

One of the Great Laws.

The injunction, "Love one another," is as applicable to nations as to individuals. It is one of the great laws of heaven. And nations, like individuals, may well measure their nearness to God and his glory by the degree to which they regulate their conduct by this duty.—Charles Sumner.

BONNIE

By MILDRED WHITE.

(Copyright, 1920, Western Newspaper Union)

The clatter of the boards brought the girl to herself with a start—how many of the small bridges had they crossed since the beginning of the early afternoon? Lost in unhappy dreamings, she must have come very far.

Dora had determined not to be unhappy. So it was that she laughed and chatted overmuch at home with the old couple who sheltered her. It was in hours of relaxation like this, that sad realities protruded.

She did not feel the cold of the early winter air in the exhilaration of exercise. Dora's cheeks glowed scarlet as the winter berries peeping from beneath their beds of fallen leaves. The beautiful horse upon which the girl was seated seemed to enjoy with her the freedom and invigorating chase over country roads.

Dora talked to him softly as she brought him to a walk. Bonnie was her safe and chosen confidante. Bonnie was the dearest thing to her the world now contained, because of Bonnie's association with one other, whose dearness persisted, when it should in all self-respect be banished.

Dora went over her life as the horse picked his way through the wooded path, dwelling sadly upon the last three years. She had been an odd little atom, moved about here and there since her orphaned childhood.

She was thrust upon relatives who did not seek her coming yet ever mourned her departure. And then, three years ago, when the girl's frailty became very evident, it was suggested by the physician that she go away, out to the wide spaces surrounding the home of the old aunt and uncle of her dead mother. Here it was believed that the tonic air would restore the girl's strength and give to her her place in the world. Dora had been lonely at first among the rugged hills and shadowy woods, until—he had come; he, the one who satisfied every need of her hungry heart.

He had been so interested, so kind, and under his good-natured supervision, Dora gained health and strength, grew round and red of cheek, and merry.

John Hamilton, civil engineer, pressed upon the girl the use of his favorite horse Bonnie, and taught her to ride in the saddle, often by his own side, through woods and fields. And the hours thus spent together became enchanted hours, for love found them both.

The old aunt and uncle smiled understandingly, glad that their beloved girl should know happiness, even as they had known and kept it through all the years.

Dora blossomed in her joy like a small being transported. Then, one evening she came into the cottage home, silent in a grief which bore no questioning. John Hamilton had confessed to her through his love the fact of his owed allegiance to another.

He had been betrothed, he told her brokenly, to a girl back home, before his contract called him to work among the hills. This girl and he had gone to school together, their ultimate union being always an accepted fact. They became engaged before his departure for the new field. It was understood that they were to be married at Christmas. This was November—he would have to go back; he would tell Anita of Dora; that he had not known true love until he had met her. But this Dora forbade.

He must in all honor go back, she told him, and fulfill his promised part. In the hopelessness of their parting he begged Dora's acceptance of Bonnie—his last gift.

Since John Hamilton had gone, Dora seated upon the horse's back, had traveled many miles, with eyes unseeing, and heart weary. Now, upon this November day, she realized suddenly, that she had lost her way as the light falling snow changed into a bewildering storm. With a cry of dismay the girl bent her face to Bonnie's white mane.

"You'll have to find our way home, boy," she said. In the cold and the storm and the swift falling dusk, she clung with eyes closed against her fears as Bonnie bore her bravely on. Dora had no doubt that he would find his way to the warm shed behind her uncle's cottage. It was his coaxing neigh which brought Dora perplexedly to an upright position to find herself in a spacious barn. Bonnie was confidently making her way toward a stall. And before the stall stood a man.

"I have just come back," John Hamilton explained hastily. "Absence works many changes, dear, and 'love is not love, that alters.' Anita wished me to set her free. There was a good-looking young fellow hanging over her at the piano when I entered her home. I think he is the reason, so I hurried back to you. Oh, my dear, how I did hurry back!"

Dora raised a radiant face.

"Bonnie knew," she said, "he brought me to you."

"The gentleman disclaims any knowledge of a huge slush fund spent in his behalf."

"And you will observe he does so without rancor."

"Quite so. I also observe that the gentleman was elected, which may explain the absence of rancor."

Flour is Soaring

Have just received a carload of 330 barrels of GOLD MEDAL FLOUR direct from Minneapolis and am prepared to take care of my trade at a reasonable price as long as my stock lasts. FEELING BLUE ALL THE TIME

Before Taking Cardui, This Georgia Lady Suffered Until She Would Have to Sit Down to Do Housework.—Was Dizzy and Weak.

Dalton, Ga.—Mrs. V. A. Burnett, of Route 6, says: "I got down with my back and sides, not able to do my work. I suffered a great deal. I had a depressed, blue feeling all the time.

"I couldn't rest at night. I was nervous. I would be dizzy and just no-account at all.

"I would have to sit down while trying to do the housework. It seemed I couldn't get my breath. I was afraid I would get past going altogether.

"I heard of Cardui and began using it. I could see after a half bottle it was helping me, so I kept it up . . . and soon I was like a new person.

"I knew Cardui did the work, for no other medicine I took ever helped me as it did. I certainly can recommend . . . Cardui."

This well-known medicine, which Mrs. Burnett says helped her, is a mild, medicinal, purely vegetable tonic, for over 40 years used by thousands of women, with similar results to those which this Georgia lady obtained.

Meant What She Said.

Mabel—How can you be so insincere? You told Mr. Boreleigh that you were sorry you were out when he called.

Marie—Oh, no, my dear, I said I was sorry he called when I was out. You see, he's likely to call some time when I am in.—Boston Transcript.

Finger-Prints in Babylon.

A group of valuable historic tablets from the excavations of the city of Babylon, bearing dates as far back as three and a half centuries before the Christian era, was recently secured. Several of the pieces carry the distinct prints of the fingers which molded them over 2,000 years ago.

SHOES WEAR LONGER

When you walk in comfort; so do stockings. A package of Allen's Foot-Ease, the antiseptic powder to shake into the shoes and sprinkle in the foot-bath, gives you that "old shoe" comfort and saves wear. NOBLE RELICS OF THE PAST

Triumphal Arch of Titus, at Rome, and the Colosseum, Are Splendid in Their Ruin.

The Triumphal Arch of Titus in Rome, was built in 70 A. D. to commemorate the defeat of the Jews, and was dedicated to the Emperor Titus after his death. It is adorned with fine sculptures in relief. On the frieze outside is a sacrificial procession and on the inner side Titus is seen crowned by Victory in a quadriga driven by Roma. On another part of the arch is a triumphal procession of Jews, the Table of Shew Bread, and the seven-branched candlestick. In the center of the vaulting the consecrated emperor is seen being carried to heaven by an eagle.

In 1882 the arch was a set of ruins, and some of the medieval additions were removed and it was partly reconstructed. The colosseum, with seats for 50,000 spectators, originally called the Flavian amphitheater, was completed by Titus in the year 80 A. D., and derives its later name, probably, from a colossal statue of Nero. The colosseum is now all in ruins.

Price and Percentage.

Increase of price when measured in percentage is very often incorrectly given. When the price doubles the increase is 100 per cent, but many people describe it is an increase of 50 per cent.

Vanity in early rising does not abate itself because its earliness is due only to an inability to sleep.

LIFT OFF CORNS!

Doesn't hurt a bit! Sore corns lift right off with fingers. Magic!

Costs few cents! Drop a little Freezone on that touchy corn, instantly that corn stops hurting, then you lift it right out with the fingers.

Why wait? Your druggist sells a tiny bottle of Freezone for a few cents, sufficient to rid your feet of every hard corn, soft corn, or corn between the toes, and calluses, without soreness or irritation. Freezone is the much talked of discovery of the Cincinnati genius.—Adv.

Publicity and Practice.

"How did you lay the foundation for your colossal fortune?" asked the young man.

"I worked all day and studied all night," replied Mr. Dustin Stax. "I attended church regularly and avoided all bad habits——"

"Is this the way you would advise me to proceed?"

"Why—er— I didn't know you wanted the information for your personal use. That's different, of course. I thought it was an interview for a magazine article."

WOMEN NEED SWAMP-ROOT

Thousands of women have kidney and bladder trouble and never suspect it.

Womens' complaints often prove to be nothing else but kidney trouble, or the result of kidney or bladder disease.

If the kidneys are not in a healthy condition, they may cause the other organs to become diseased.

Pain in the back, headache, loss of ambition, nervousness, are often times symptoms of kidney trouble.

Don't delay starting treatment. Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a physician's prescription, obtained at any drug store, may be just the remedy needed to overcome such conditions.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.—Adv.

LEARNED LESSON OF THRIFT

Boys and Girls of New Jersey Town Have Made Record of Which They Are Proud.

If there has been less talk of the servant problem in Bridgeton, New Jersey, than elsewhere, it is quite explainable. Not to be outdone by their European sisters and brothers in matters of thrift and industry, 25 youngsters in that town have invested $1,000 in United States thrift stamps this year, thanks to their own hard work. Boys and girls alike have welcomed opportunities of doing remunerative dishwashing, sweeping, dusting, store clerking, baby-minding, errand-running, etc., with the goal of economy symboiized by government stamps ahead of them. The more ambitious have undertaken cutting weeds, carrying coal, sifting ashes, selling papers, raising chickens, cleaning pavements and some have even won prizes to add to their savings. Having found that time can be converted into money it is doubtful whether these boys will again find the street corner a worthwhile place for spending idle hours, or the girls be content to waste periods in porch chatter.

Its Identity.

"Rip Rumble is a—hee! hee! hee!—wag!" chuckled old Riley Rezzidew of Petunia. "He told me he was going to Kay See for a surgical operation—anyhow, he guessed likely he'd have his pocket book removed."

"We do not see anything especially waggish to that statement," returned the assistant editor of the Weekly Palladium. "Knowing Ripley as we do, and having been in Kansas City several times, ourself, we consider it a plain and plausible presentation of a perfectly probable possibility."—Kansas City Star.

What Really Counted.

Woman Seeks Sunken Riches

Salvages Cargoes From Vessels That Have Gone Down in Great Lakes.

DIVER GAVE HER THE IDEA

Mrs. Margaret Campbell Goodman Has Recovered Fortunes From Wrecks on Floors of Inland Seas.

Cleveland.—Mrs. Margaret Campbell Goodman, the only woman salvager in the world, has regained a fortune which went down with the steamer Pewabic, in Lake Huron, 55 years ago. Succeeding where many men had failed, Mrs. Goodman has broadened her scope of work until she now has contracts to raise sunken fortunes in almost every sea.

Mrs. Goodman spent her early life in Mount Pleasant, Mich., and after her school days she went to Toledo, O., her present home. There she became interested in diving suits, after witnessing an exhibition of deep-sea diving in which the diver went down 361 feet, remaining under water for 45 minutes.

Treasure on Sea Bottom.

This feat of deep-sea diving convinced her that scouring the floor of the sea for sunken treasures would be a profitable business. Remembering the loss of the Pewabic, Mrs. Goodman, after much discouragement, formed a stock company. She went to Alpena, Mich., and found Capt. John Persons, who had stood with his father, keeper of the lighthouse in Thunder Bay, and watched the ship founder.

Later, Mrs. Goodman located George P. McKay, the captain of the Pewabic. Captain McKay was living in Cleveland and showed Mrs. Goodman the manifest of the lost vessel. It showed that the Pewabic carried in her hold tons of copper, worth $200,000 or more, and several hundred tons of pig iron. In the ship's express box was $50,000 of "shin plasters."

The work of searching for the Pewabic was begun in 1916. In the first season's work, the divers took out 100 tons of copper and 100 tons of pig iron. Many interesting relics were discovered which, when possible, were forwarded to the relatives of the sailors who had lost their lives a half century ago. When the treasure chest of the ship was brought to the surface, the "shin plasters" were found to be watersoaked and valueless.

Considerable work was done in 1917, until the needs of the government, at war with the central powers, called a halt to all salvaging operations.

To Salvage Cargo of Logs.

Mrs. Goodman's next contract is to salvage a schooner that sank in Lake Erie in 1864. She has a release from the owners and will begin work about July 1. This schooner carried a cargo of black walnut and white oak logs, chained to the deck, and Mrs. Goodman expects no difficulty in salvaging the cargo.

Formerly a newspaperwoman, Mrs. Goodman has made a success of a business which is as interesting as it is dangerous. She dislikes being described as a woman diver, because she has never gone under water herself, and she says she does not expect to do so unless for the purpose of increasing her own scientific knowledge.

NEW YORK LOSING AS PORT

Harbor and Railroad Strikes Send Shipping to Philadelphia and Baltimore.

New York.—Eighty per cent of New York city's export trade has been diverted to Philadelphia, Baltimore and other eastern ports by shippers desiring to avoid the congestion caused here by harbor and railroad strikers, according to estimates made by shipping men here.

Thousands of carloads of export freight have been switched to other cities because of railroad embargoes, it was stated.

Some shipping authorities declared permanent arrangements for the use of other ports would be made unless the tieup here is broken soon. A total of 37 cargo steamers ordinarily sailing from this port cleared from Philadelphia last week.

Deserter Lives Long in Cave

Ohio Youth Fears Firing Squad Because of Visit to Family.

GIVES UP AFTER TWO YEARS

Hides in Hills, Feeds on Herbs and Wild Berries and Such Scanty Food as His Wife Got to Him.

Chillicothe, O.—Stories of how a neighbor deserter from the Union army during the Civil war had been brought to bay in a nearby village by a United States marshal and shot, brought visions of a similar fate to Carl Amerine and impelled him to hide in the hills almost two years rather than face a firing squad at Camp Sherman.

Amerine, drafted into the army, left a wife and two-year old babe at home, in the quiet, picturesque hills. He could neither read nor write and the largest village visited in his 24 years had numbered less than a thousand inhabitants. The bustling thousands at the camp, military restraint and customs weighed heavily on him and an impelling desire to see his wife and baby boy led him to quit camp to see them without obtaining permission.

Fears Firing Squad.

At home, his father, a tottering veteran of the Civil war, told him he was a deserter. Visions of the firing squad flashed through his mind. Kissing his wife and baby he took to the hills.

There Amerine found a cave in which he slept most of the time, venturing forth only at night and at times during the day when there was little chance of being seen. His only fare was such scanty food as his wife could get to him, herbs and wild berries gathered from the woods and fields, and such wild game as he could catch. The cave in which he lived is said to be large enough for only one person, and could have been defended against many. So closely did he watch all approaches to his hiding place that until a few days ago he had been seen by no one except his wife and a brother-in-law.

Persuaded to Give Up.

Military authorities had abandoned the search for Amerine. Three weeks ago an attorney friend of the family became interested and implored the wife to have her husband return and give himself up. She steadfastly held that her husband would be shot if captured and refused to have him return.

Clarence Stone of Adelphi managed to get word to the youth last week that his was not a case of desertion, and there was no danger of a firing squad. Amerine cautiously left his hiding place, and visited Stone's home, where they went over the situation. He agreed to give himself up.

Amerine again went to Stone's home. His wife brought his uniform, which she had preserved for him and had neatly pressed for the occasion. With Stone and an attorney, Amerine went to Camp Sherman and surrendered to the adjutant. He made no comment except to express himself as being well pleased that "it is all over."

Harnessing the Sun's Rays.

That the rays of the sun can be used for curing many skin diseases, and that sun baths are beneficial to those who are in perfect health, is well known. The problem of utilizing this agency in northern countries where the hours of sunshine are few has been solved, he claims, by a British doctor, M. J. de Thezac.

His invention consists of a revolving cabin, combined with a huge lens for concentrating the rays on any part of the enclosed patient's body. This installation has just been tested in the neighborhood of Quimper, France.—Popular Science Monthly.

The evening party was over, and most of the guests had gone, so the story goes. As one young man took leave of the hostess the lady said:

WANTED IT AS A WARNING

Old Gentleman Had Particular Use for That Peculiarly Atrocious-Looking Beetle.

On the counter of the Christmas bazaar stood all the usual horrors which an unscrupulous world insists on giving the poor kiddies as "toys." There were animals, birds and insects which resembled nothing save the creatures of a particularly fierce nightmare.

The customer steadied himself by a chair, and after a careful selection, picked up one specially terrible beetle.

"I'll take that," he told the assistant, "How much is it?"

"Half a dollar!" replied the girl. "Is it for your little boy?"

"No, I want to take it to a dinner party I have to attend."

"Well, I'm going to stand it in front of me on the table when the drinks are going round and when I see two beetles—well, it's time to go home!"

King Governs Marriages.

Spanish diplomats are forbidden to marry without royal permission by a decree published in the Official Gazette. If this order is disregarded the offending person will be suspended from office and his wife will be excluded from diplomatic privileges.

The object of the decree is to prevent diplomats marrying women without means or of undesirable reputation. Similar rules are applied in the case of naval and military officers and noblemen.

Backache Slowing You Up?

Are you dragging about with a dull, throbbing backache? Feel lame mornings, tired all day? Suffer torturing twinges at every move? Often the kidneys are to blame. Use Doan's Kidney Pills. They have helped thousands. Ask your neighbor!

WILLING TO STRIKE BARGAIN

She was one of those dress women who always wear the latest thing whether it suited her or not.

One day her hat touched her nose; next week it rested on the back of her neck. Her last frock barely covered her shoe tops, her new one huddled round her ankles. Oh, she was always "it!"

Her husband was no passive resister. Regularly he raised his voice in protest at each craving after fashion. But the one thing that really annoyed him was when she suddenly scraped her hair straight back from her forehead on top and trained it down like window curtains on each side of her face.

"Look here!" he said, in exasperation. "Can't I induce you to stop wearing your hair over your ears?"

Mount McKinley Sinking.

Mount McKinley, the Oregon mountain, is sinking with the weight of ages. Within the last several years, when the peak shrugged its rocky shoulders in earthquakes, the loftiest mountain in North America has subsided at least 500 feet from its original altitude of 20,400 feet. Such was the assertion of Herschel C. Parker, geologist and mining engineer, who first scaled Mount McKinley in 1912.

"SEE AMERICA FIRST"

Conditions in Europe Not Attractive to Tourists.

Poor Hotel Accommodations and Scarcity of Food Keep Americans at Home.

Washington.—Sponsors of "See America First" ideas will find consolation in the stories reaching the United States of conditions in Europe which tend to discourage "going abroad" this year. One of the big obstacles to tourists of foreign lands is the lack of transportation facilities. Throughout the continent rolling stock is at a premium and passenger service is badly crippled.

While conditions in France and England are not pleasant for the tourist, eastern and southern Poland and parts of Germany are even less attractive. Typhoid fever and spotted fever have come over the borders of Soviet Russia into Poland, and the food situation adds to the distress there.

Tourists to Europe this summer will find that they did not leave high prices at home, for the Europeans have boosted the prices of nearly everything which is to be sold to American tourists. This is most noticeable in Germany, where the practice of discriminating against Americans is rampant. Much of the same discrimination exists in England and France, although the governments are doing everything to check it.

For many months Europe has suffered from the effects of the unfavorable rate of foreign exchange in endeavoring to buy commodities in the United States, and the American tourist is now paying some of that deficit.

Well, He or the Hen Deserves a Medal

Los Angeles.—Edward Schaffer of Broadway, Venice, has one hen in his flock of eight that has distinguished herself. She is a Plymouth Rock, 2 years old. During the past two weeks she has laid fourteen eggs, not one of which weighed less than six ounces nor measured less than eight and three-quarters inches around. Schaffer says there is no doubt that it has been the same hen in each instance, for each egg bears a trademark which consists of two pronounced elevated rings around one end of the egg.

Fogel's Prices LOWER Read Why

SINCE telling in our last-week's "ad" why Fogel's Department Store neither should nor could follow the 20% reduction fad, because we had never made the common profiteering advances in our goods, we have been pleased to see that a number of old, conservative firms in Philadelphia and elsewhere have made the same declaration, using in their "ads" almost the very words in our own. Therefore, we think it proper once more to refer to this fact.

Here is a little incident showing how true our words are. A firm in a south Delaware town casually learning of our low prices on certain goods now risen in price, wrote asking us as a favor to sell them a large amount of these goods of which we had, months ago, bought very heavily. We did so, sold them goods 20% or more below the present advance wholesale price—that is, for the same prices we are still selling these goods to our patrons. In other words, we are selling for $1.25 a garment which cannot now be bought wholesale for less than $1.50! We can show this letter to anyone.

But another factor has arisen. The unusually cold Spring has left many manufacturers with large, unsold stocks on their hands which they must turn into cash to meet their obligations—hence big reduction inducements. Thus we have been able to secure for our patrons a number of real Bargains in these goods sold very low for the reasons given above. We give below several of these Bargains.

Women's New Summer Dresses

We have just bought for these lower prices, a lot of fine Summer Dresses, in gingham and voile, in pretty colors, plaids and figures, a cool, comfortable Dress for a hot Summer's day. We are selling these Dresses for the extremely low prices of $2.75 to $10.00. They would be cheap at $5 and $15, and ladies who know what such Dresses are being sold for can, at a glance assure themselves that we are truly offering a very attractive bargain indeed! We only ask your examination.

Ladies' Muslin and Knit Underwear

For like reductions we have also secured a lot of excellent Ladies' Muslin Underwear, Skirts, Nightgowns, Envelope Chemises, Corset Covers, Drawers and Brassiers, where the mere goods would cost you more than we offer the made-up garments for! Their styles and prices are so numerous we cannot specify each. Again we say "come and see".

Besides these two lots we have many other articles which we are offering at heavy reductions from the usual prices. Besides this, we may in justice to ourselves, inform you that we have today on our shelves piles of new, fresh goods of many descriptions that we selling for prices way below these marked-up profiteer goods of many merchants, even after this 20% has been taken off! We invite your call and inspection, then buy we know you will,
